

Dear Rob --

Greetings from Andrew Denton's team at Go Gentle Australia. There's been a lot on the go around Australia this year and now the focus is well and truly on Victoria.

As you probably know, there'll be a conscience vote in state parliament from August onwards this year. This will be a truly historic occasion: when Victoria has a chance to lead the way on humane end-of-life laws in Australia.

With your help we can make this law happen – and provide a compassionate choice for those in suffering.

Today we are taking the first step in our campaign with the release of a powerful video featuring Victorian nurse, Jen Barnes, who has been diagnosed with an aggressive form of brain cancer.

Please be sure to share Jen's story with your friends and family as well as your social networks.

What else can you do to make this law a reality?

First sign Jen's petition - visit our website, read why Jen wants a law and show your support.

Share your personal story - If you have a personal story to share, whether about you or someone you love then please let us know. Your story is a powerful way to show members of the Victorian parliament what it would mean to have a law in place and how it would Stop Victorians Suffering.

Share our campaign – please engage your family, friends and all your networks. Surveys consistently show that around 75% of Australians support a safe and compassionate law. We need to make sure that state politicians hear the voices of the majority and enact the will of the people, rather than react to the fears of a minority.

Donate to our campaign – we want to make the loudest noise possible. And we need your help to do it. Our campaign involves everything from newspaper ads to video production to brochures. And there's our campaign team to feed as they rally support to tell local state MPs why we need this law. Every little bit helps so we dearly appreciate whatever you can give.

And of course, if you want to offer any services to our campaign we'd love to hear from you. Reply to this email and we will be in touch personally.

Thank you for your support!
